A maximum of four faculty members from each of the health sciences schools will be accepted for participation in SITE. While targeted to new faculty members, faculty with teaching experience who are interested in expanding their teaching skills may also participate. Participants are expected to advance from SITE to the Teaching Fellows Program in the subsequent academic year. The Teaching Fellows Program extends the mission of SITE by providing professional development activities and mentorship for educational scholarship, such as a curriculum development initiative or projects suitable for presentation and publication.

Applicants to the SITE Program should submit the following:

1. Cover letter expressing your interest in the program. Please address the following questions: Why are you interested in the SITE program? What will you contribute to the experience? How do you envision participation in the program will improve your teaching?
2. One-page proposal for a project (e.g., curriculum development or evaluation of a teaching innovation) you will initiate during the program.
3. Copy of your CV.
4. Letter of support from your Department or Program Chair.
